THE WASHINGTON CRITIC.

Washington, D. C. RICHARD H. SYLVESTER, - - Editor

WASHINGTON, MAY 4, 1886.

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA. The first treaty between the United States and China was one of peace, amity and commerce. It was negotia-ted by U. S. Minister Caleb Cushing, under Tyler's administration, and was proclaimed in 1846. It related wholly to the terms on which our citizens might reside and trade in China. It limited the privilege to five ports which The treaty was subject to it named. modification in twelve years. Accordingly, in 1858, under Buchanan's administration, another similar treaty was negotiated by U. S. Minister Wm. B. Reed. Neither treaty contained any reference to privileges of Chinese in the United States. Either the Chinese Government desired no privileges for its subjects in the United States or else it took for granted that no treaty stipulations were necessary to confer them. The second treaty opened two additional ports at which our citizens could reside and trade.

The discovery of gold in California attracted a considerable immigration of Chinese, commencing in 1850. They were allowed to mine only as gleaners on claims others had passed as un profitable, or had worked out and abandoned. A heavy foreign (allen) miner's tax was imposed by the State, but enforced almost exclusively upon the Chinese. There were no very serious outbreaks against them, because for a long they time interfered with but few people. Being finally driven more to the towns, they came in competition with white laborers, and then the trouble began. The development of the agricultural resources of the State, so long retarded by the absorbing chase for gold, brought further friction in a competition for farm work.

The voluntary immigration of Chinese would not probably have been large or persistent in the face of opposition, but their coming was stimulated by the dealers in Coolie labor. This was made the subject of penal legislation by Congress as early as 1862-six years before the Burlingame treaty was entered into. The act defined the "Coolie trade" to be "the procuring from any port or place the subjects of China, Japan, or of any other Oriental country known as 'Coolies,' to be transported to any foreign port or place to be disposed of, or sold, or transferred for any time, as servants or apprentices, or to be held to service or labor.

This statute never was enforced. In a letter to the chairman of the House Committee on Pacific Railroads in May, 1874, C. P. Huntington, vice-president of the Central Pacific Rallroad Company, speaking of the Construction Company (consisting of himself and associates in the railroad directory) and its work, said: "It imported a large number of laborers from China-some eight or ten thousand-and prosecuted the work much more advantageously than before." A "coolie" is defined to be "a hired laborer."

This wholesale competition of imported coolie labor led to a mob attack on the Chinese at San Francisco early in 1867. This was followed by anticoolie organizations for the avowed purpose of inaugurating the policy now known as boycotting. This was made an issue in the State election that year, and the anti-Chinese sentiment carried the State for the Democratic party.

This should have been accepted as an admonition that the European and Mongolian races could not peacefully contend for the labor market of the Pacific coast. It would have been an easy thing then for our Government to prohibit the immigration of Chinese laborers, for, by the then existing treaty, Americans were only allowed at seven ports in China, and the occupations they might pursue were much restricted. But in 1868 our Minister to China, Anson Burlingame, resigned, accepted the appointment of Minister from China to the United States, and, as such Minister, came to Washington with Chinese associates and negotiated a new treaty with Mr. Seward, then Secretary of State under Andrew Johnson

In its next reference to the subject of our Chinese relations, THE CRITIC will pay its attention to the Burlingame

As TO THE subsidy question in the Senate yesterday, Mr. Eustls of Louis iana clearly had the best of the argument. He cannot understand how a man can consistently vote a guarantee of $87,500,000 to a private corporation to help it build a ship rallway and at the same time refuse the aid of the Government to help build up our deeayed and neglected mercantile marine. Between free ships and steamship subsidies he holds there is no antagonism. Says Mr. Eustis:

France has free ships to-day, and yet rance subsidizes steamship lines to the nount of $5.128,000 a year. Germany has see ships to day, and yet. Germany subsizes steamship lines. Italy has free ships to-day, and yet Italy subsidizes steamship lines. England has free ships to-day in every sense of the word, and yet. England subsidizes steamship lines."

Why should not the United States come within the same category? MR. GLADSTONE'S latest manifesto. addressed to his Mid-Lothian constituency, is not intended, of course, for local consumption entirely. It will go far towards breaking up the opposition which Tory and Conservative agitation has stirred up during Easter. His review of the situation is a strong one in itself and is a direct appeal for the support of his friends. He does not ask for Tory or Conservative aid; but the "common people"—always the bulwark of England's institutions, and now the really dominant element in her elective system. Mr. Gladstone was the mainstay of the "silent revolution"
